Wonderful!

I will claim the win once the site is on a sound path to clean-up, until then I will continue to pester and poke. Let me know if it gets too annoying – you are the one person on this project that needs NO prodding at all.

Good morning, Scott.

OK, first, you're welcome, but I should be thanking you. I imagine you've done your job. Now it's time for us to step up and do ours. I worked with an attorney who once said he enjoyed working with my unit because we had "a healthy sense of impatience". I try to live up to that. What are we waiting for?

Today at 10:30, I'm meeting with James Neely (from King County) to discuss what the county would consider to be a site investigation that would make them comfortable with assuming control of the site following EPA removal of the known hazardous substances. I hope to have a pretty good idea of what the site investigation will look like by the end of this meeting.

Thanks, again, Scott. I'll let you know.

Jeff

Jeff

First off – thanks so much for coming along to the meeting last week and for your ongoing support in the clean-up effort. I greatly appreciate it!

Second – as you start to formulate your plan if you come up with some notion as to the number of monitoring wells you think will be needed and get some idea of how frequently they will need monitored could you let me know? I am trying to get ECY to step up and help with that aspect and they are wondering what the commitment would look like.

Thanks,
